Showdown At Orient House

Steve Leibowitz

The process of closing Orient House will begin in the coming days. This, according to Mayor Olmert whose announcement came last Sunday, the day after riots broke out in front of Orient House. On Saturday, hundreds of Palestinians, some throwing stones, attacked police and then fled into Orient House for safety. Just outside the gates, as police were fighting it out with Palestinians in front of the world media, attackers from inside the compound were tossing bottles, stones and other assorted debris at the security forces. The police could see their attackers, but had orders not to pursue them into the PLO's Jerusalem headquarters. Some law officers opened fire with rubber bullets through the gates on the compound before being surrounded by Palestinian rioters. The police then retreated and the rioters entered the building.

vice from highly respected attorney Dan Avi-Yitzhak, on how as mayor, he could legally close down the building.

According to Yitzhak, Orient House is zoned as a hotel and not offices, and as such, can be closed down for this infraction. In fact, the building, which is owned by the Hussein family, had operated as the New Orient Hotel until 1987. Even after being turned into an office complex, the family paid taxes as a hotel until 1993, at which time the Olmert administration came into office and forced the family to pay the higher rate as an office complex.

Yitzhak's legal opinion is based on Article 204 of the Building and Planning Code - allowing the mayor to seek a court order to close a building which although zoned as a hotel, is functioning as something else. There is now the question of whether the PLO's Orient House is a hotel or an office building. The PLO's Orient House is a hotel or an office building. The PLO's Orient House is a hotel or an office building.

tations on the Israel/PLO accord, secret letters were sent by Foreign Minister Shimon Peres to the Norwegian Foreign Minister promising to allow Orient House to function as Palestinian headquarters in the city. Therefore, the government is treating the building as a sacred cow.

Libe explained, "The authority to act against institutions of the Palestinian Authority or the PLO is reserved by the government of Israel, and not the opposition - not even one who is serving as Mayor of Jerusalem."

Peres and Environment Minister Yossi Sarid, also attacked Olmert, suggesting his true objective was to torpedo the peace process. But at least two government ministers were not so quick to criticize Olmert. Following the cabinet meeting, Police Minister Moshe Shinar and Religious Affairs Minister Shimon Shetretzki agreed that neither the Orient House nor the peace process should be further affected. Shetretzki stressed the need for a special cabinet committee to deal with the issue and suggested that the committee should include the Prime Minister, the Foreign Minister, the Defense Minister, the Education Minister, the Health Minister, the Labor Minister, the Justice Minister, the Transport Minister, the Housing Minister, the Social Security Minister, the Tourism Minister, the Culture Minister, the Science Minister, the Environment Minister, the Information Minister, the Communications Minister, the Energy Minister, the Water Minister, the Agriculture Minister, the Forestry Minister, the Fisheries Minister, the Marine Resources Minister, the Natural Resources Minister, the Environmental Protection Minister, the Planning Minister, the Regional Councils Minister, the Local Authorities Minister, the Civil Service Minister, the Public Works Minister, the Transportation Minister, the Infrastructure Minister, the Urban Planning Minister, the Land Use Minister, the Zoning Minister, the Building Minister, the Construction Minister, the Real Estate Minister, the Mortgage Minister, the Insurance Minister, the Banking Minister, the Finance Minister, the Taxation Minister, the Customs Minister, the Excise Minister, the VAT Minister, the Stamp Duty Minister, the Inheritance Tax Minister, the Gift Tax Minister, the Capital Gains Tax Minister, the Corporate Tax Minister, the Income Tax Minister, the Personal Income Tax Minister, the Social Security Tax Minister, the Pension Tax Minister, the Unemployment Insurance Tax Minister, the Health Insurance Tax Minister, the Education Tax Minister, the Culture Tax Minister, the Sports Tax Minister, the Entertainment Tax Minister, the Gambling Tax Minister, the Lottery Tax Minister, the Casino Tax Minister, the Horse Racing Tax Minister, the Betting Tax Minister, the Gaming Tax Minister, the Amusement Tax Minister, the Entertainment Tax Minister, the Cultural Tax Minister, the Educational Tax Minister, the Scientific Tax Minister, the Technological Tax Minister, the Industrial Tax Minister, the Commercial Tax Minister, the Financial Tax Minister, the Legal Tax Minister, the Professional Tax Minister, the Religious Tax Minister, the Charitable Tax Minister, the Non-Profit Tax Minister, the Public Service Tax Minister, the Government Tax Minister, the State Tax Minister, the National Tax Minister, the International Tax Minister, the Cross-Border Tax Minister, the Multi-National Tax Minister, the Global Tax Minister, the Universal Tax Minister, the World Tax Minister, the Planet Tax Minister, the Universe Tax Minister, the Cosmos Tax Minister, the Galaxy Tax Minister, the Solar System Tax Minister, the Sun Tax Minister, the Moon Tax Minister, the Stars Tax Minister, the Planets Tax Minister, the Comets Tax Minister, the Meteors Tax Minister, the Asteroids Tax Minister, the Space Tax Minister, the Outer Space Tax Minister, the Deep Space Tax Minister, the Far Space Tax Minister, the Endless Space Tax Minister, the Infinite Space Tax Minister, the Boundless Space Tax Minister, the Limitless Space Tax Minister, the Unfathomable Space Tax Minister, the Untold Space Tax Minister, the Uncharted Space Tax Minister, the Undiscovered Space Tax Minister, the Unknown Space Tax Minister, the Unexplored Space Tax Minister, the Uncharted Space Tax Minister, the Undiscovered Space Tax Minister, the Unknown Space Tax Minister, the Unexplored Space Tax Minister.

Dear Editor

LETTERS

Denmark Thanks

My name is Yonatan Mendel and I'm an 11th grade student at the Denmark School. I read your report about my school and its closure (Testing The System, 11 June 16). I wanted to say that the article was very good and objective: you let people with different opinion express themselves.

Me and my friends were interviewed for Kol Ha-ir, Kol Yerushtalayim, Michael Carpin's TV program and also some of the radio stations. All of the above didn't publish our words because they all tried to show the bad side of Denmark and the bad side of integration, but they didn't let the other side express themselves.

I have to compliment your fine article and also to thank the reporter, Ahron Shapiro, for doing fine work and allowing us to express our side too. I wish all papers and media were like you. Well done.

Yoni Mendel

Out Of Their Tree

We don't seem to have much mazel with our ecology in the Jewish Quarter (Jewish Quarter Tree-Son, 11 May 19 & Tree Chop, Letters, 11 June 16).

Now I'd love to see certain trees removed for the simple reason that their presence invites vandalism in its saddest form. I refer to the varied citrus fruit trees dotted around the Quarter: lemons, clementines and pomelos.

Beginning in springtime, their aromatic blossoms get torn down any-old-how, damaging whole boughs in many cases. Then, when the fruit begins to show, the "little green balls" become irresistible to little grubby hands, and not-so little ones. Rarely are these fruit allowed to reach their prime.

The botanic expert responsible for including these trees in the landscaping was far, far out on a limb.

Slumming It
 Re: Neapolitan Slum (Letters, 11 June 23).

I am a Neapolitan, and I think that you do not have to go so far to see slums. It is enough to go to Tel Aviv or even closer to some 'picturesque' quarters of the Holy City... like Mea Shearim!

Jewish Quarter Tree-Son. As the unfortunate facts described in my article were unfolding, residents of Rehov HaMalakh in the Jewish Quarter contacted Ms. Joanne Samuels, an advisor at the Mayor's office; as well as the director of the department for the improvement of the city - the municipal department in charge of city landscaping.

Whereas Ms. Samuels could not or would not provide even the most basic information as to our options in the matter at hand, the department in question did not answer our repeated faxes, reporting the incident and requesting vital information for further action.

It took us residents some precious time to find out who had jurisdiction over the whole matter - a question that any competent and concerned municipal representative could have answered without much ado. In the meantime, the city's rumbling ax chopped and chopped. Only public exposure could move the city to scratch the surface of the problem.

The most lenient comment one can make about the city's approach to our concerns is that it reminds us of Pontius Pilate's hypocritical "washing of hands", a patty, irresponsible and unbelievable shifting of blame in the face of embarrassing negligence on its part. Should we indeed believe that at City Hall the right hand does not know, or cannot influence what the left hand does?

No doubt, the city is more interested in the glossy extravaganza of "Jerusalem 3000" than in the less glamorous, yet ultimately far more enduring art of good administration and responsible government.

Joy For Jay

Good news for Jay Feinberg, the 26-year old New Jersey man suffering from leukemia who touched the nation's hearts when he came to Israel two years to find a suitable bone-marrow donor. After a four-year world-wide hunt, a donor has been found. An American woman who cannot be named until after the transplant, was tested recently and deemed a compatible (if not perfect) match for Jay. The transplant to be carried out in the next couple of weeks will provide Jay with a good chance of complete recovery. If all goes well, Jay says he intends to celebrate the anniversary of his transplant in Jerusalem.

Just a few months ago U reported on a group of young students connected with Yavneh Olami in Jerusalem who raised thousands of dollars and organized a blood drive here in the capital to help find a donor for Jay. Yavneh Olami's program director Mush Meyer told U, "We're all ecstatic about the news and wish Jay and his family every success with the transplant. We also hope that in the future more people's lives can be helped through the efforts of these students."

New traffic lights

The city has decided to install 22 new traffic lights which will operate 24 hours a day. The decision follows the high incidence of traffic accidents in recent months. Mayor Olmert and Deputy Mayor Shmuel Shaked chose the new locations after receiving an extensive report on the issue. The new lights are located at: Kikar Tzfat; Keren Hayesod/Ahad Ha'am; Keren Hayesod/Washington; Keren Hayesod/Mapu; Kikar Plummer; Shlomo Hamelech/Kikar Mamilla; Kikar Tzahal; Ben Tzvi/Binyanei Hauma; Kikar Nordau; Ben Tzvi/Bezalet; Ben Tzvi/Ruppel; Derech Hebron/Elia Gedi; Yehuda; Ester Hamalka; Miriam Hahashmona'im; Kikar Navon; Golda Meir/Road number 4; Golda Meir/Road 9; Road Number 1/Me'ale Adumim Road 13; Herzog/Gaza; Tchernikovsky; Herzog/Nayot; Herzog/Oivat Mordechai.

Stabbings Continue

Police are stepping up efforts to apprehend the Old City serial slasher before he strikes again. Five Jews have been wounded by the attacker in the last month. In each case, the attacker struck from behind. In three of the stabbings, the weapon used was a screw driver, and in the other two cases, a knife was used. Police have picked up a number of suspects for questioning, including 16-year-old twins from Wadi Joz.

Back to the Street

Haredi leadership is urging a return to street protests over the Bar-Ilan Street Shabbat closures. The plans result from growing speculation that the city appointed committee dealing with Shabbat road closings will call for Bar-Ilan Street to remain open. A haredi source told In Jerusalem that the only option is massive opposition in the streets. They hope this will sway the authorities to close the road, no matter what the committee recommends.

Here Comes the Pope

Pope John Paul II may visit Jerusalem in early 1996. This, according to Cardinal Cassidy, the Patriarch's special envoy to the Jewish people.

The Cardinal made the announcement at a reception held in Nazareth, in honor of the anniversary of diplomatic relations between the Vatican and the State of Israel.

J'm 3000 Mayoral Support

The Honorable Victor Ashe, Mayor of Knoxville Tennessee and president of the US Conference of Mayors, last week issued a statement informing Mayor Ol

As such, the US Conference of Mayors will send a delegation to participate in the 16th Jerusalem Conference of Mayors to be held next March. In his response to Mayor Ashe's statement, Olmert thanked the mayors for their support, emphasizing that, "In a time of peace we do no split cities and we do not build walls..."

"The city's industrial base is not shrinking," claim officials at the Jerusalem Development Authority (JDA), the six-year-old state/municipal body entrusted with promoting the city's development. In the past year and a half, the number of people employed in industry in Jerusalem has grown by 3.3 percent and the number of companies has increased by 12 percent.

"There is a balance between openings and closings," states Meir Nitzan, JDA chief executive officer. "We are witnessing the closing of low-tech industries in the city and the entrance of high-tech."

In fact, in the past few years, the city has undergone a phenomenal growth in its industrial parks and the number of high-tech and technology-based companies which now call Jerusalem home.

This is welcome news for Jerusalem, which has traditionally been an economic stepchild to Tel Aviv and Haifa, mainly due to the city's poor industrial base. For years, more than 50 percent of Jerusalem's workforce was concentrated in the lower-paying public sector, with only some 12 percent in industry and manufacturing.

The JDA, a non-profit body whose 1994 budget totaled nearly $4.5 million, has played a major role in bringing about this revolution.

"We have no trouble marketing Jerusalem to investors. The problem was and is land."

— Meir Nitzan, Jerusalem Development Authority

The newly-developed Jerusalem Technology Park at Malha.

On A Roll

With the recent closings of such long-time Jerusalem factories as the Hadar Biscuit Company in Talpiot and Mega Shoes in Romema, along with other local companies moving to Beit Shemesh, the impression has been created that the city's industrial base is shriveling up. Gail Lichtman discovers the opposite.

with the active encouragement of two City Hall administrations.

"As mayor, I view the growth and success of the city's economy as a serious priority," says Mayor Ehud Olmert. "We have high potential here, and I am convinced that this potential can be realized in technological and commercial development."

The JDA lobbied hard to win a Jerusalem Development 'A' status for science and high-technology based investment enterprises. "No other city in Israel has this status," Nitzan claims. "All the others are Development B, with less attractive benefits."

Development A status entitles investors to one of three capital investment incentives: One, a government grant equal to 38 percent of the investment in fixed assets. Two, a government-guaranteed loan equal to two-thirds of the total equity investment plus exemption from corporate taxes for 10 years. Or three, a government grant equal to 25 percent of the investment in fixed assets plus a government-guaranteed loan equal to 41.66 percent of the total equity investment.

In addition, investors benefit from land made available at prices up to 70 percent lower than the market value, lower land development costs, and R&D incentives from the Office of the Chief Scientist in the Industry and Trade Ministry.

This policy is paying off. According to the Jerusalem Industrialists Association, in 1994, the city's high-tech industries had a combined gross income of NIS 2.16 billion. More than 70 high-tech companies have established research or production facilities in the city over the past two years. The current rate of industrial investment in Jerusalem is almost double the national rate. The number of requests for approved enterprises in the capital has nearly quadrupled over the past three years, from $60 million in 1993 to $230 million in 1995. And the JDA and the city, over the past year, have been busy developing an additional 572 dunams of industrial area.

Har Hotzvim, located on 220 dunams, now employs some 2,700 Jerusalemites in 24 companies. It is home to such high-tech giants as Intel, Teva and John Bryce. Har Hotzvim was the most profitable industrial center in the city in 1994 — with a gross income of NIS 1.1 billion, of which $285 million was export. The area is scheduled to double in size with the development of Har Hotzvim Bet, Gimmel and Daled.

Oivat Shaul, with 3,700 employees in 86 companies, had a gross income of NIS 600 million in 1994, of which $31 million was export. Integrating high-tech with the metal and printing industries, Oivat Shaul is also undergoing expansion to the tune of an additional 40 dunams.

Atarot now has 1,400 employees in 52 companies. It had a 1994 gross income of NIS 300 million, of which $35 million was export. An additional 70 dunams are slated for development in Atarot, which by the way, is the only industrial area in the city to enjoy Development Status A for all industries, not just high-tech.

At Pisgat Ze'ev, 150 dunams is being developed for high-tech at two separate sites.

But clearing the jewel in the crown is the newly-developed Jerusalem Technology Park at Malha. Covering 70,000 sq.m. on 60 dunams, the park is envisioned to provide employment for up to 2,500 workers and to serve as one of the power centers of the Jerusalem economy.

In the last year, nine companies have moved in, occupying approximately 2,500 sq.m. in the park. In addition, six companies will take up residence in the next few months and three companies are in the process of signing contracts.

The city recently managed to add a feather to the park's cap with the announcement that Timex, the $2 billion US-based watchmaker would be opening a 256 sq.m. R&D facility in Malha. For Timex, which has not even marketed its products in Israel, this will be its first operation in

"There is no doubt that suspension of expropriations will halt development in Jerusalem."

— Mayor Ehud Olmert

Israel and its first R&D facility outside of the US. Mayor Olmert reportedly played a key role in persuading the company to come to the capital.

Also moving to Malha will be Silicon Graphics of California, a medical high-tech company.

"We have no trouble marketing Jerusalem to investors," Nitzan notes. "The problem was and is land. The potential amount of land available is low and there is great competition for land use."

Asked how he thinks the freeze on land expropriations would affect Jerusalem development, Nitzan sidesteps the question.

"The Joint Committee for a Master Plan needs to locate more areas for industrial status. It will be more difficult and will entail more detailed planning. We will just have to be more efficient in our land use."

Mayor Olmert, however, is more direct: "There is no doubt that suspension of expropriations will halt development in Jerusalem."

Whether Jerusalem can sustain long-term impressive industrial growth in the face of the freeze is still speculation. But, for the short-term, at least, the city seems on a roll.

Nightline — a new nightclub, will open in Jerusalem on July 5. The club, owned by Amir Chai, is touted to be "a live entertainment restaurant, bar and dance club hangout for English speakers and tourists, students and artists." It will be located at 18 Yad Harutzim, Talpiot. Opening night is by invitation only. House singer will be Tema (pictured), originally from New York, and now a singer with The Mptones acapella group.

new 'millionaires' at a ceremony at City Hall. Those being honored have not necessarily struck it rich yet, but they are owners of new businesses, which managed to earn at least NIS 1 million in sales this year. They are some of the most successful of the 4,800 people who started businesses this year with the assistance of the Development Center. The businesses and owners selected are:

Alexander's Ltd. (Dror Mazar and Yosef Scharf); Artistic Castings Ltd. (Yitzhak Cohen); Baby Center Ltd. (Yoram and Yuval Yezdi); Gal Auto Systems Ltd (David Hasid and Gregory Barkov); The Resnikov Brothers (Yosef and Alexander Resnikov); Dr. Mark's Bakery (Dr. Mark Steingold); Kata Professional Ltd (Nitzan Kimhi and Dror Tischler); Mattresses and More Ltd. (Itzik Zilka, Yossi Nahum and Gabi Cohen); Pasiel (Michal and Noam Yidov); Pepporinis Ltd. (Ram and Mazal Yedid); Plastiv Ltd. (Zamir Bar-Lev); Reznikov Bros. (Yosef and Alexander Reznikov); Yukady Construction Ltd. (Yuri Aber and Arkady Reginsky).

Sex Studies

The World Movement for Progressive Judaism has announced the addition of a new course on the connection between sex and the study of Torah. The lectures will deal with the sexual obligations of the yeshiva student to his wife. The course will be taught by Rabbi Maya Leibovic.

Meals On Wheels

In the past 12 months, the municipality's Welfare Department provided over 100,000 meals to approximately 600 needy senior citizens. The service is one of the many provided by the Welfare Department, and is available to all senior citizens who either request or are recommended to the service by public health nurses or social workers.

There are approximately 100 support staff who work for the Welfare Department. They are trained for 180 hours in different topics and upon graduation receive a certificate from the Labour and Welfare Ministry.

Mysterious Donors

Last Sunday morning, the Saul Hirschberg School was dedicated at Garizit Street, Kiryat Menachem. An additional project was dedicated that evening at the Beit Esther Community Center on Itzhak Tunk Street in East Pisgat Ze'ev. The ceremonies were held in the presence of Mayor Olmert, and the heads of the Jerusalem Foundation, Teddy Kollek and Ruth Cheslin.

Beit Esther will serve as a community club for Pisgat Ze'ev. The two-story building, covering an area of 1,150 sq. m., will house activities for the elderly as well as youth, two units for babies and toddlers, and a multi-purpose hall, for activities and art workshops. The Association of Community Centers is a partner in this endeavor.

Both projects were made possible, thanks to the generosity of one family who wishes to remain anonymous. So far, they have contributed over $6.5 million to various projects in the city.

For Whom the Bell Tolls

A giant bell will be constructed just north of the newly opened tunnel in Sacher Park near Bezalel Street. The 1.5 meter high, two-ton bell will be hung from a giant wooden tree trunk six meters off the ground. All this 'artwork' is being donated by a Japanese businessman who will have it engraved with the word 'Shalom' in Hebrew, Arabic, English and Japanese.

The city also plans to surround the tunnel with 34 sculptures of a lion — the symbol of the city (pictured).

Volunteer Week

Volunteer Week kicked off with a ceremony attended by Mayor Olmert and Deputy Mayor Nissim Ze'ev, Batya Vashitz, chairperson of the Council of Associations for Welfare and Volunteer services and Leora Smider, director of the Welfare Department.

Various volunteer projects currently underway in Jerusalem help mothers and families, visiting the sick, community center work, working with handicapped and learning disabled children, work with the elderly and others. Volunteer Week will continue until July 7. For additional information, please contact the Volunteer Section of the Welfare Department, 254-361.

Changing The Status Quo

Mayor Olmert met with the President of the Norwegian Parliament, Ms. Kirsti Kolle Gynodahl this week. During the meeting, the fate of Orient House was discussed. Olmert said, "People like to say that closing Orient House is a change in the status quo of the city. But one cannot look at the situation only from one perspective. If someone announces he doesn't recognize the municipality of Jerusalem, is that not a change in the status quo? Last week, Faisal Hussein announced that the Palestinians will have their own municipality operating from Orient House."

Rabbi David Forman

There was Moses sitting at the top of Mount Sinai, copying down God's commandments. As we learn from the biblical narrative, Moses often challenges God, entering into a spirited dialogue with the Almighty. The dialogue goes something like this:

God: "Moses, thou shalt not boil thy kid in its mother's milk."

Moses: "Dost Thou mean that one must have separate dishes for milk and meat?"

God: "Moses, just listen. Thou shalt not boil thy kid in its mother's milk."

Moses: "Dost Thou mean that one must wait several hours before eating meat after drinking a glass of milk?"

God: "Moses, I told thee already. Thou shalt not boil thy kid in its mother's milk!"

Moses: "Dost Thou mean that one must never have a Big Mac with cheese in Thy Holy City of Jerusalem?"

God (exasperated): "Okay, Moses, have it thy way!"

I guess something ultimately went awry these past few thousand years since God introduced this commandment. Of course, with the intervening years, there were attempts to fine-tune God's intention. Indeed, that simple singular sentence set in motion an entire set of laws regarding kashrut.

Big Macs have invaded "kosher-tight" Jerusalem. While other non-kosher restaurants operate in Jerusalem and its environs, it is difficult to imagine a McDonald's in the heart of the city. For not only does McDonald's represent "treif" at its tantalizing best, it also symbolizes the ultimate American invasion of the Jewish land.

So how was McDonald's allowed to open its doors in "Orthodox" Jerusalem? How is it that Mayor Olmert's haredi coalition partners barely uttered a word at McDonald's incursion into sacred territory? Why have there been virtually no Orthodox protests?

Let's switch gears for a moment. I'm curious to know how some places in Jerusalem, not just the Talpiot discotheques and movie theaters, are permitted to have entertainment on Friday evenings. I mean electric jazz, rock, boogie, blues, folk... you name it, where tickets are sold at the door, and where the adjacent takeout coffee houses do a whopping business during the intermission.

Now anyone who has any understanding of the halachic world, knows that you cannot trust someone's kashrut if he or she does not observe Shabbat. Yet lo and behold, at least one of these above-mentioned places has a kashrut certificate. I guess when Moses failed to raise this scenario at Mount Sinai, it was eventually to be understood that such blatant violations of the spirit of Jerusalem steak houses are very popular. Now, there is not necessarily a direct halachic relationship between the ritual observance of kashrut and the spiritual purity that might stem from cleanliness.

related places have in common: McDonald's, a kosher Friday evening entertainment spot, a kosher electrified Shabbat Bar Mitzva hall, a glatt kosher Chinese restaurant, and a kosher l'mehadrin steak house? With the exception of McDonald's, circumstances do not favor any of the above institutions receiving kosher purity.

I would like to find out how a kashrut certificate is issued to eateries that sport an electronic "at the hop" gig on Shabbat. As for the exaggerated prices at glatt kosher Chinese restaurants, I suspect a high salaried mashgiach (kosher supervisor) must be employed to check on the non-Jewish Vietnamese cooks to insure they are not "treifing" up their Jewish clientele. Regarding the Jerusalem steak houses, your guess is as good as mine as to how many maintain their licenses, when "al-ha-eish (on the fire)" really means "al ha-clash", ashes and all.

As far as McDonald's is concerned, our mayor must have extraordinary skills in keeping his haredi municipal cohorts under wraps as streams of Jerusalemites order McDonald's cheeseburgers with milk shakes on Shabbat.

I, a faithful Jerusalemite, prefer to frequent the restaurant I ate at in Tel Aviv. At the entrance was displayed a home-made kashrut certificate: "kosher m'ratzon" (kosher by choice). No hypocrisy here.

Although no less a halachic authority than Maimonides provides hygiene as one rationale for the dietary laws. "I maintain that the food forbidden by law is unwholesome" (Guide to the Perplexed 3:48). However, at many of our capital city's steak houses, any notion of "cleanliness being next to Godliness" (Avodah Zarah 20b) is cast aside, as the cooks, making good on the menu offering of the famous "Jerusalem mixed grill," drop their cigarette ashes into the food. But halachically, such untidiness does not disqualify these restaurants not only from being considered kosher, but some from being kosher l'mehadrin. And I suspect that once a kosher certificate is granted, the restaurant is licensed, even if it could not pass the standards of the Health Ministry.

Now, what do all the above

Beit El Water Torture

For residents of three communities north of Jerusalem, water supplies in the summer are sometimes even less than a drop in the bucket.

Ahron Shapiro reports.

For Beit El's kids, summer without water has become a way of life.

The summer sun beats down relentlessly on Israel's mountains and valleys. Another shavim. You arrive home from work tired and sweaty, and jump into the shower to feel human again. You turn the faucets and... nothing. A nightmare? If you lived in the settlements of Beit El, Pisgat, and Ofra, it would be a common occurrence.

Residents of these communities say they have suffered from a summer water shortage for years. The outages can last for hours or days and come virtually without warning.

Yedidya Amusi, head of the Local Council of Mateh Binyamin's Water Council, says the root of the problem lies in the fact that the water supply for the affected settlements passes through nearby Arab districts, and the Ramallah Water Works can ultimately decide when to cut off water to the settlements.

"Mekorot, the national water carrier, sells the water to Ramallah and then buys it back for use in the settlements," says Amusi. "At one time Ramallah's water mains were too narrow to handle sufficient water for the area, but now the pipes are bigger and the shortages persist."

Some residents can't help but wonder if there isn't some malice

"We're like all Israelis. We pay taxes, we go to the army. But where water is concerned, we're second-class citizens."

in the water cutoffs.

"I don't know if they're doing this davka, or if it is a problem unique to the area," says Eit Ivgi. "They always seem to know the moment of the greatest inconvenience to us," adds Adina Fireman.

The effects of the shortages are felt even more severely by the residents since the water tends to be cut off on or just before Shabbat and festivals. In this mostly religious yishuv, that makes for real hardship.

"This is the time when everyone is trying to cook, clean and take showers. It is absolutely the worst time to lose your water," Fireman says.

Last year, after water was cut off for four consecutive days, residents protested outside the water plant in Ramallah. However, they say the situation did not improve.

"We're concerned about Ramallah controlling our water now, but are even more worried about what will happen after the autonomy begins. Then, they will have total control over our water. They could contaminate it," says one Beit-El resident.

Amusi says the local council shares their concern. "The water commissioner at the agricultural ministry assures us that nothing will happen, that there will be no deterioration in the water condition and that there will be no sabotage."

A walk through a neighborhood in Beit-El reveals some peculiarities resulting from the chronic water shortage. Large black cylindrical tanks filled with water are staggered along the streets. On some of the rooftops, alongside the ubiquitous solar water heaters, homeowners have installed emergency water reserve tanks.

However, residents say even these tanks are no solution. Not everyone can afford to install a rooftop storage tank. Also, with no way to know if an outage will last two hours or two days, residents say they save this water for cooking and flushing toilets. There simply isn't enough reserve water for showers for the entire family.

The shortages hit the homes without storage tanks the hardest. "We have to keep jerrycans of water on hand," says Ivgi. She sighs deeply and continues, "With six children at home, how can we be without water?"

David Frankel is the principal of Yeshiva Tichonit Mateh Binyamin in Beit El. Through his work he is in close contact with many of the affected residents. "There are times when people get so frustrated they just want to sit down and cry - and sometimes they do," he says.

Residents say they are embittered by the broken promises and the lack of motivation on behalf of the government to help them.

"I have been here for 18 years, and there has been no improvement. We always get promises from Mekorot and the local council, but nothing changes," says Hanna Adorian. "We're like all Israelis. We pay taxes, we go to the army. But where water is concerned, we're second-class citizens."

Amusi says help is on the way, in the form of a pipeline that will bypass Ramallah's control over the settlement's water.

State Water Commissioner Gidon Tzur, confirmed Amusi's assertion. "We are aware of the problem and are taking steps to fix it," he told LD.

"The government told us the problem would be fixed by this year, but it's not going to happen. Now, they say for sure it will be ready for the summer of 1996... with God's help," concludes Amusi.

COMMIT TO BE FIT

Before or After You Eat...

Health & Fitness Consultant Reuven Bruner, Ph.D, explains that the benefits of exercise is all in the timing.

How a person's body reacts to specific foods and the timing of meals can vary with each individual, especially when exercise is added to the equation. Some people may get an upset stomach if they eat too soon before a workout, whereas others may feel listless and drained if they do not eat before they exercise.

Regardless of whether a person eats before or after exercise, one thing is certain: active muscles need fueling. Thus, the old taboo about not exercising right after eating has faded.

Rating after exercising aerobically, has several advantages. Working out at an intensity more than 50% of the volume of oxygen raises people's metabolic rate, causing them to continue burning extra calories even after they have stopped exercising. Most of this "afterburn" occurs within the first hour after exercise but can linger for a few more hours, depending on the intensity of exercise. The cause of the afterburn, known technically as excess post-exercise oxygen consumption, is not fully understood. Evidence suggests that exercise stimulates several energy-related cycles, that require extra oxygen.

Another advantage of eating after exercising is that exercisers deplete their muscle glycogen stores, helping carbohydrates eaten after the workout to be efficiently converted to glycogen.

Active muscles need fueling.

taboo about not exercising right

rather than stored as fat. Both elite and recreational sports persons have a similar two-hour window after exercising when carbohydrates are readily assimilated. Recreational athletes who exercise so that they can eat a candy bar should eat it soon after exercising. This way, the glucose in the candy bar replaces the glycogen lost from the muscles.

An additional advantage of eating after exercising may be particularly attractive to dieters. If the exercise is intense enough, it can blunt the appetite. We speculate that when exercise raises the body temperature, some protective feedback mechanism suppresses the appetite until the body cools enough to meet the demands of digestion.

Once the body does cool down and the exerciser is ready to eat, the importance of carbohydrates is great. A two-mile run depletes 55 grams of carbohydrates - the equivalent of about three to four slices of bread. Failure to replenish carbohydrates as fattening, impairs the performance of even recreational athletes. Exercising aerobically for 90 minutes drains the glycogen stores and leads to exhaustion.

Most people don't eat enough carbohydrates because they are unaware of exactly what they should be eating. Because they still consider breads and other carbohydrates as fattening, many people eat the meat from a sandwich and throw away the bread. Such thinking is erroneous. For a high carbohydrate meal, we suggest a turkey sandwich (with lettuce, tomato and mustard) on whole grain bread, a cup of applesauce, a few crackers and a glass of juice. This meal provides 515 calories and 92 grams of carbohydrates - which means more than half of the calories come from carbohydrates.

Schedules or preferences sometimes cause exercise to fit in best after a meal. Exercising after eating is a new and unusual concept, with benefits if people engage in the right kind of exercise.

The right kind of exercise after meals is not vigorous but moderate. During a hard workout, such as long-distance running, the digestive tract may receive only 20% of its normal blood flow, which slows digestion. To prevent stomach distress, the exercise should be no more intense than a brisk walk. Suggested activities include low-intensity cycling, gardening, playing catch or a leisurely game of badminton.

Exercise after a meal can boost the thermic effect of food (the energy cost of digestion by 15%). It is calorically more expensive to take a brief walk when the stomach is full. In addition, exercise hastens digestion and relieves the bloated feeling after a meal.

When counselling patients who work out early in the morning but want something in their stomachs before they exercise, we suggest they eat only a light snack, such as a bowl of cereal and non-fat milk. When to eat and exercise can be dictated by more than just schedules and preferences. Some patients may have medical conditions that warrant careful timing of their meals.

Exercisers of any level should listen to their bodies and experiment to see what works best.

For more information on fitness, health, nutrition, lectures, consultations and stress reduction concerns, call Dr. Bruner at 322422, 662921.

JERUSALEM FILM FESTIVAL

The 12th Jerusalem Film Festival hosted by the Cinematheque, gets underway next week with the official opening, on July 6 at Sultan's Pool. A giant screen will be erected and 5,000 people can munch their popcorn and view the opening of The Madness of George III - the film version of the highly successful stage production which toured here last year.

According to Lia van Leer, director of the Film Center and the Israel Film Archive at the Cinematheque, the Sultan's Pool screenings are always a main attraction. "These days people tend to watch television and video. And it's just not the same as seeing something on the large screen. It's like Eddie Cantor's comment he made when he saw television - 'If I were a woman I could never fall for a man' (on the small screen)."

With something for everyone, there are films from literally all over the world. "Our aim is to show the best films of each year," explains van Leer, "to be accessible to people throughout the country. This is our way of presenting what is going on in the world."

Subsequently, this year there are several films dealing with the problems happening in Yugoslavia. However, van Leer quickly stresses they are not documentaries. "They are surrealistic films, and as such are extremely moving." She cites the film Before The Rain as one example. Before The Rain has been entered into "In The Spirit of Freedom" competition. It is the third year this competition has existed. The competition was established in memory of Wim van Leer, who was deeply committed to the quest for freedom. All the films in this category are reflections of the struggles and complexities facing people around the world.

Also screening at Sultan's Pool on July 10 will be Claude Lelouch's Les Misérables. Lelouch's film in French with Hebrew subtitles spans the 20th century, interweaving key scenes from Victor Hugo's masterpiece. The saga has 100 characters and over 5,000 extras and combines French literary classics with the history of France. It stars renowned French actors Jean-Paul Belmondo, Annie Girardot and Philippe Léotard. Lelouch is one of this year's guests, and he and members of the cast will be on hand at the screening.

This year's budget is around $800,000 and van Leer estimates 40,000 to 50,000 people from around the country will attend, as well as 100 guests from abroad. Following the tradition of the last seven years, the festival, explains van Leer, despite being an international one, is also designed to help Israeli filmmakers. As such, 15 directors of Jewish Film Festivals from around the world will participate in this year's festival, giving them the opportunity to invite Israeli films to their festivals abroad.

To encourage national talent, this year for the first time will be the "Lipper Award", established by the Lipper Foundation in New York. It is an annual prize of NIS 30,000 for the best original screenplay written by an Israeli. Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Lipper established the award to advance Israeli filmmaking, "because it could provide the world with a unique vision from an uncommon national experience."

And for the seventh year running, the festival will present "The W o l g i n Awards" for Israeli filmmakers in the categories of outstanding full-

27-year-old Xavier Beauvois' "Don't Forget You Are Going To Die," about people coming to terms with AIDS.

"Fresh" - Boaz Yakin's film about a 12-year-old drug runner in Brooklyn's slums.

Jun Ichikawa's "Tokyo Twins" - traditional Japanese values pitted against 20th century modernity.

"Babyfever" - Henry Jaglom's film looks at women trying to balance their desire to have children with the problems facing them in the '90s.

Fresh is about black children living in Brooklyn's slums as seen through the eyes of a 12-year-old boy. The film is produced by Lawrence Bender of Reservoir Dogs fame, and has been critically acclaimed at the Sundance, Cannes, Tokyo, Montreal and London Film Festivals.

Other Festival guests include Xavier Beauvois, the 27-year-old talented French director, whose film N'oublie Pas Que Tu Vas Mourir (Don't Forget You Are Going To Die), dealing with AIDS will be screened. Also appearing will be Henry Jaglom with his new film Babyfever: For Those Who Hear Their Clock Ticking. Billed as "a fascinating journey into the biological clock," Babyfever stars Jaglom's wife Victoria Foyt as Gena, a career woman who can't decide whether she wants to have a child with her boyfriend.

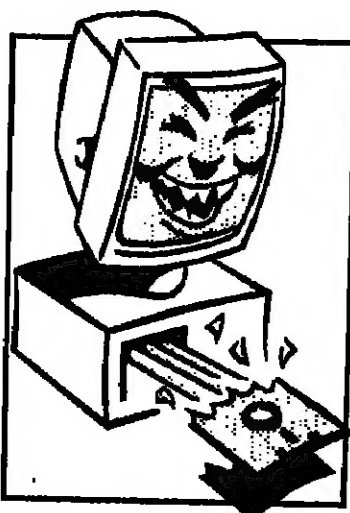

To add a little light-heartedness to the proceedings there will be a Buster Keaton retrospective, because as van Leer points out "there's no real belly laughs" in any of the other movies being presented. The Keaton movies are all brand new prints.

Other highlights include: September Songs, a tribute to the music of Kurt Weill, and a newly restored print of the classic Les Enfants Du Paradis.

The festival runs from July 6-15. Single tickets are NIS 24; screenings at Sultan's Pool NIS 36. A daily pass for seven films is NIS 65. ## OFF THE BEAT Do you feel that marijuana should be legalized?

By Shella Zucker

Yari Bernstein, 15
Oran

Yes, because I heard that doctors report that it doesn't harm you. People who want to use it will use it anyway, but now they will get into trouble.

Vered Rav-Hon, 32
pharmacist
Ramat Sharett

No. I don't think it's healthy and it causes other additions because not everyone knows his limit until he passes it!

Danny Silpak, 24
student, Kiryat Hayovel

No. Because I think that when you start with soft drugs it opens the path for entering the world of hard drugs. I don't say this will happen to everyone who uses marijuana, but it can happen.

Rachel Goldberg, 25
waitress
Old Katamon

No, because I think it would make way too many people happy. Besides it would take away the challenge of getting through customs at Ben-Gurion Airport!

Moshe Ozer, 54
set designer
Pisgat Ze'ev

Yes definitely, so that people will not turn to hard drugs. And, it's better than alcohol.

Strike Up The Band

Cathy Rubin

JEST's (The Jerusalem English Speaking Theatre), production of The Music Man premiered on Sunday night, and proved to the audience that this amateur, yet hard-working group of thespians possesses a unique quality. With limited resources, the cast of 31 adults and 11 children performed with vibrant spirit and dedication, and kept the audience entertained with their wide-eyed animation until the final encore.

The opening act set the energetic pace for the rest of the show, with the wicker-hatted traveling salesman discussing the wondrous and crooked talents of the "music man." At this point, we are introduced to Professor Harold Hill himself, who decides to take on the challenge of selling his phony band ensemble to the stubborn folk of River City, Iowa.

The rest of the plot consists of Professor Hill's pursuit of the town librarian, along with the townspeople's trust and money. But his well-worn routine fails, when he falls in love with Marian, and his thievery is exposed.

The cast proved to be a convincing group of Iowans, complete with gossipy womenfolk and idiot mayor. Bulalic Mackecknie Shun, played by Sharon Saunders, performed exceptionally, making the most out of her pompous, judgmental, mayor's wife.

Another fine performance was carried out by David Schneer as Professor Hill. While Schneer considers himself a "not really experienced" actor, his performance seemed to be anything but. Schneer, an exact replica of Kevin Klein, lit up the stage with his enthusiasm and talent. And as for the child actors, Schneer called this his best experience working with kids. "They were so dedicated and eager with a real artistic sense."

This eagerness was apparent in each major musical number, particularly with "Seventy-Six Trombones," where the whole cast sang and danced, and the children marched proudly with their knees high. "Marian the Librarian" was an adorable love scene with eavesdropping readers keeping the beat of Hill's love song with their feet.

Also, worth mentioning is Elisha Jacobsen as Winthrop Paroo - the lispng brother of Marian, with his solo "Gary, Indiana." Winthrop only finds his voice again after Professor Hill gives him something to be proud of. Coincidentally, Winthrop's debut was also Jacobsen's debut.

Some of the kids from JEST's "The Music Man"

It seems the 13-year-old actor is quite new to the business. Sunday's performance of The Music Man was his first ever acting experience. "At first, I was nervous," says Jacobsen, "but when I saw that people were enjoying it, I felt like it came naturally. Everyone starts clapping and you begin to feel confident."

The energetic performance was highlighted by the grandeur of the costumes, created by Isabelle Harris. Costume changes were frequent and colorful.

JEST was created in 1985 in order to establish a community theater in English. The Music Man marks the group's fifth and largest musical, with the 42-member cast ranging in age from eight to 80.

With its unique variety of performers and inspiring display of energy, The Music Man is a real family show guaranteed to entertain all ages. The opening night audience thoroughly enjoyed the show, and demonstrated its appreciation with a roaring round of applause.

You can still catch The Music Man at the Gerard Behar Center on July 3 at 8pm, July 6 at 5pm and 8:30 pm and July 11 at 8pm. Tickets: Contact 251139, 240896 or 256869.

Entries for Capital Calendar must be received by Sunday, 9 a.m. in writing ONLY. All events are in English unless specified otherwise. Call ahead to confirm that events are taking place; avoid disappointment.
